Working Principle

Hammer crusher is mainly used to crush material by impact. The material enters the crusher and is broken by the impact of a high-speed rotary hammer. The broken material obtains kinetic energy from the hammerhead, and thus rushes towards the baffles and screen bars at high speeds. At the same time, the materials collided with each other and were broken several times. Material smaller than the gap between the screen strips was discharged from the gap. The individual larger materials were again broken by the impact, grinding, and squeezing of the hammer on the screen strip. It is extruded from the gap by a hammer to obtain the desired particle size product.
