Product Description

Product Introduction

Flotation machine is the equipment to complete the flotation process, which is also called flotation cell. It is widely used for the rough, fine and reverse flotation operations of copper, lead, zinc, nickel, molybdenum and other non-ferrous metal, ferrous metal and nonmetal minerals. The types of flotation machine mainly include mechanical agitation flotation machine and froth agitation flotation machine.

Working principle

The impeller is rotated by V-belt of motor and produces negative pressure by centrifugal function. Enough air is sucked to mix slurry, and slurry mixes drug at the same time. Mineral sticks on bubble completely and floats on the surface of slurry to form mineralized bubble. Useful bubble is scraped out by adjusting flash-board height and controlling liquid surface.

The impellers and stators should be kept at a distance and should be changed when worn. The bearing in the pump should be maintained every three months.
